

Question:

All of the following hereditary conditions predispose to CNS tumors, except -Answer Choices:A. Neurofibromatosis 1 & 2B. Tuberous sclerosisC. Von-Hippel-Lindau syndromeD. Xeroderma pigmentosum

Reasoning + Answer:

<think>The assistant is thinking about the fact that hereditary conditions can be caused by a variety of factors, such as genetic mutations, that can affect the development of the central nervous system. These conditions can be caused by a variety of factors, such as genetic mutations, that can affect the development of the central nervous system. The assistant is also thinking about the fact that hereditary conditions can be caused by a variety of factors, such as genetic mutations, that can affect the development of the central nervous system. The assistant is considering the fact that hereditary conditions can be caused by a variety of factors, such as genetic mutations, that can affect the development of the central nervous system. </think><answer>D. Xeroderma pigmentosum</answer>

