

Question:

You are the team physician for an NBA basketball team. On the morning of an important playoff game, an EKG of a star player, Mr. P, shows findings suspicious for hypertrophic cardiomyopathy (HCM). Mr. P is an otherwise healthy, fit, professional athlete. The playoff game that night is the most important of Mr. P's career. When you inform the coach that you are thinking of restricting Mr. P's participation, he threatens to fire you. Later that day you receive a phone call from the owner of the team threatening a lawsuit should you restrict Mr. P's ability to play. Mr. P states that he will be playing in the game "if it's the last thing I do." Which of the following is the most appropriate next step? Answer Choices: A. Consult with a psychiatrist to have Mr. P committed B. Call the police and have Mr. P arrested C. Allow Mr. P to play against medical advice D. Educate Mr. P about the risks of HCM

Reasoning + Answer:

<think>Given Mr. P's diagnosis of hypertrophic cardiomyopathy and the critical nature of the upcoming playoff, ensuring his health becomes the paramount consideration, thereby advocating for no play aligns with maintaining his wellbeing amid the health risks he bears.</think><answer> Educate Mr. P about the risks of HCM</answer>
