

Question:

renal papillary necrosis is caused by ?Answer Choices:A. alcoholB. cocaineC. heroinD. morphine

Reasoning + Answer:

<think>Renal papillary necrosis is a necrosis of the renal papilla which is a complication of chronic use of the drug methanol that is found in adulterated alcohol and can cause metabolic acidosis and when the body tries to correct the acidosis by excreting more acid in the urine it leads to the formation of crystals of methanol in the renal papilla which leads to the tissue death of the renal papillas</think><answer>A . alcohol</answer>

