

Question:

A mental health volunteer is interviewing locals as part of a community outreach program. A 46-year-old man discloses that he has felt sad for as long as he can remember. He feels as though his life is cursed and if something terrible can happen to him, it usually will. He has difficulty making decisions and feels hopeless. He also feels that he has had worsening suicidal ideations, guilt from past problems, energy, and concentration over the past 2 weeks. He is otherwise getting enough sleep and able to hold a job. Which of the following statement best describes this patient's condition?

Answer Choices:

- A. The patient is at risk for double depression.
- B. The patient may have symptoms of mania or psychosis.
- C. The patient is likely to show anhedonia.
- D. The patient likely has paranoid personality disorder.

Reasoning + Answer:

<think>

- The patient's long history of sadness , feelings of hope lessness , and recent worsening of symptoms suggest a chronic condition .
- He describes a sense of being cursed and anticipating negative outcomes , which can be part of major depressive disorder .
- The patient has significant issues with decision -making and self -worth , as well as suicidal ide ation , consistent with depression .
- The recent worsening , along with specific symptoms like suicidal ide ation and hope lessness , are more suggestive of depression rather than mania or psychosis .
- His ability to hold a job and get enough sleep indicate not severe impairment , unlike what might be expected in some severe conditions .
- An hed onia is a core symptom of depression and refers to the inability to feel pleasure . The patient's description of hopeless feelings and recent worsening align s with this .
- There 's no information to suggest mania or psychosis .
- Paran oid personality disorder is characterized by a pervasive pattern of distrust and suspicious ness , which is not the main issue here .

</think>< answer>C . The patient is likely to show an hed onia .</answer>