

Question:

A mental health volunteer is interviewing locals as part of a community outreach program. A 46-year-old man discloses that he has felt sad for as long as he can remember. He feels as though his life is cursed and if something terrible can happen to him, it usually will. He has difficulty making decisions and feels hopeless. He also feels that he has had worsening suicidal ideations, guilt from past problems, energy, and concentration over the past 2 weeks. He is otherwise getting enough sleep and able to hold a job. Which of the following statement best describes this patient's condition?

Answer Choices:

- A. The patient is at risk for double depression.
- B. The patient may have symptoms of mania or psychosis.
- C. The patient is likely to show anhedonia.
- D. The patient likely has paranoid personality disorder.

Reasoning + Answer:

<think> Reasoning process here: The patient's symptoms, such as persistent feelings of sadness, hopelessness, difficulty making decisions, and worsening suicidal ideations, have been ongoing for a long time, and the patient is experiencing significant distress and impairment. The patient's fear of impending doom and difficulty concentrating and making decisions are also characteristic of depressive illness. While sleep and energy are reported to be okay, the mental health professional can see that the patient is grieving the loss of response
